National Park Guide

Using This Guide
Whether you are traveling to Mount Rainier, Canyon de Chelly, or the Statue of Liberty—visiting a national park can be exciting. This guide can help you plan your visit to the natural, historical, and recreational areas in the National Park System. General information about the recreational activities and visitor services is shown on the chart below with a black dot. A few parks are shown on the map but not on this chart because they do not have the activities or services listed here. Some parks listed without dots may be under development or provide limited services now. Activities and services in the parks are provided by the National Park Service (NPS) and by private concessioners. They may be provided also by other federal, state, and local agencies, and communities.

Mission Our national parks preserve the natural, historical, and recreational areas of national significance. Many of the parks are honored by the United Nations as internationally significant and are indicated with these symbols:
■ Biosphere Reserves are major scientific and educational ecosystems that protect the diversity of life.
▲ World Heritage Sites are examples of natural wonders or demonstrate outstanding human achievement.

Fees Most parks charge fees, including entrance, camping, user, tour, boat launch, or other fees. All fees may not be shown on this guide. Prices may vary. Persons 16 and younger are admitted to the parks free. Educational group discounts may be available with advance permission only. Special permits, available at parks that charge entrance fees, include: Golden Eagle Pass, a 12-month entrance pass to all parks; Golden Age Passport, for U.S. citizens and permanent residents age 62 or older; and Golden Access Passport, for qualifying persons with disabilities. The special permits do not cover user, camping, or other fees.

Visitor Center Most of the parks have a visitor center where you can find out about the park and its activities. Hours and services may vary seasonally.

Activities Depending on the park and the time of year, you may find interpretive talks, seasonal festivals, Junior Ranger activities, and living history and nature programs. Parks with activities such as boating or horseback riding may or may not rent equipment or horses. Hunting and fishing are allowed in some of the parks, but state and federal regulations apply.

Camping Reservations may be required in parks with heavy visitation and for group sites. Sites are usually available on a first-come, first-served basis. Fees vary. Backcountry permits are usually required.

Accessibility The visitor center, restrooms, and some campsites in most parks are accessible for visitors with disabilities. Many parks offer accessible trails and exhibits, TDD, captioned films, large print brochures, audio or video tours of the park, and many other services. More activities and services are added every year for the disabled.

Plan Ahead! Contact the parks in advance about reservations, permits, regulations, activities, and services. Contact state divisions of tourism and area chambers of commerce for information about activities nearby. A guide, National Parks Visitor Facilities & Services, is available from the National Park Hospitality Association, 1225 New York Avenue NW, # 450, Washington, DC 20005-6155. Call 202-682-9507.
