This "Refuge Centennial Collection" was developed by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service employees Janet Tennyson and Steve Farrell. Elizabeth Jackson was photo editor and Jan Miller was the writer.

The "Refuge Centennial Collection" is dedicated to the memory of Richard Guadagno, refuge manager of Humboldt Bay National Wildlife Refuge in California, who was killed in the line-of-duty on September 11, 2001 in Pennsylvania, in the terrorist hijacking of United Flight 93.

Introduction

Refuge Centennial Collection

This "Refuge Centennial Collection" presents 150 of our most outstanding images representing the beauty and diversity of the National Wildlife Refuge System in this dual CD ROM set. From the cypress swamps of Okefenokee to the windswept bird islands of Alaska Maritime, your national wildlife refuges are portrayed in all of their colorful and dynamic profusion ... 100 years after President Theodore Roosevelt created America's first refuge – Florida's tiny Pelican Island.

Each public domain image is available in jpg, in multi-resolution file formats (low-resolution 72k file, suitable for the World Wide Web; mid-resolution of 5 x 7, 150 dpi; and high-resolution, print-quality, at 8 x 10, 300 dpi). Brief descriptions and photographers' credit lines accompany each photo. In addition, 25 images of the six wildlife-dependent recreational uses embodied in the National Wildlife Refuge System's mission are included in this collection, as well as a map of the refuge system in a digital file.

Disc Information

Text Files

Each disc contains searchable text files in Wordperfect, Word, and Text formats.

Disc 1

Disc 1 includes high, medium, and low resolution JPEG files of the refuge images from Alabama to Nebraska.

Disc 2

Disc 2 includes high, medium, and low resolution files of the refuge images from Nevada to Wyoming, "Recreational Use" images, and the refuge map.

Note

The high resolution files are about 20 MB's each; if your system is an older computer or you do not have enough RAM available, you may not be able to open these files.
