

The following list provides key findings from the mortality data analysis:

Out of 420+ national parks, 177 reported one or more deaths in this six-year period.

An average of 358 deaths a year were reported in this six-year period, or 7 deaths a week.

In 2019, the NPS mortality rate was 0.11 death per 100,000 recreational visits¹, which is very low when compared to the 715 deaths per 100,000 people rate of the overall U.S. population².

Most deaths (79%) occurred among males.

More than half of all deaths (52%) occurred among people ages 45 and older.

Half of all reported deaths (50%) are due to unintentional causes.

Motor vehicle crashes, drownings, and falls are the top three leading causes of unintentional deaths in parks, in that order.

Half of medical deaths (50%) occurred while the individual was engaged in a physical activity (e.g., hiking, biking, swimming).

Suicides account for 93% of all reported intentional deaths.

Suicides are a national public health concern. The objective of collecting and analyzing suicide data is to support an informed discussion about suicides in national parks.

If you are in crisis or are thinking about suicide, help is available. Call or text the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 988 as they can be reached 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

The service is available to anyone. All calls are confidential. <http://www.988lifeline.org>
