100th Anniversary of the NAACP

February 12, 2009 marks the centennial celebration of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). The mission of the NAACP is to ensure the political, educational, social, and economic equality of rights for all persons and to eliminate racial hatred and racial discrimination.

The NAACP played an instrumental role in the events surrounding the desegregation of Little Rock Central High School in 1957. Daisy Bates, the president of the Arkansas State Conference of the NAACP began an organized effort to encourage students to apply for admission to Little Rock's "white" schools. When they were denied admission, NAACP lawyers filed suit against the district, ultimately arguing the case before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Segregation and white violence against African Americans gave birth to the NAACP. One hundred years ago a multi-racial group including Ida Wells-Barnett, W.E.B. DuBois, Mary White Ovington, Oswald Garrison Villard, and William English Walling met to form an organization to fight lynching and demand justice. This was the beginning of an organized struggle to achieve equal treatment. This year, we pay tribute to this organization and say Happy 100th Birthday NAACP!

FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT'S DESK

“Our people have made the mistake of confusing the methods with the objectives. As long as we agree on objectives, we should never fall out with each other just because we believe in different methods, or tactics, or strategy. We have to keep in mind at all times that we are not fighting for separation. We are fighting for recognition as free humans in this society.” Malcolm X

The National Park Service commemorates places of conflict by preserving places of historic, cultural, or religious significance to diverse groups of people. Little Rock Central High School National Historic Site stands as a symbol of social change, where individuals exercised their fundamental human rights in pursuance of justice and equality in a land of promise and democracy. I'm looking forward to the collaboration of programs that will encourage a breakdown in social and cultural barriers, increase historical and cultural pride, empower the public, and build upon committed partnerships.

The truest expression of people is found in their traditions and values. As an intercessor for preservation, one of the National Park Service's utmost goals is to educate, by taking responsive and thoughtful actions toward preserving our birthright heritage. The National Park Service protects and preserves those special places which are important to the American people. Each “special place” has significant meaning to the individuals and communities who use and enjoy it. However, there are many communities who, for various reasons are not connected to a park near them. We will be inclusive to the stories of these people as we reach beyond the boundaries of our site, to discuss the implementation of a more aggressive campaign geared towards generating a conscious movement for human rights nationally. Through our shared history preserved in landmarks, we are able to learn lessons from past events that further enlighten and provide us a place of connection and self-understanding.

It is imperative to assert that the struggle for equality did not end with the Brown v. Board decision, based upon the legal redress of “separate but equal,” but that the struggle for equality continues today. As we embark upon the 52nd Anniversary of the desegregation of Little Rock Central High School we will commemorate historical events, with their hopes, victories, and defeats. As we stand in celebration of the human spirit, it is ideal to discuss our theme for the year, “Race and Politics in the 21st Century,” as we pave the way for the next generation.

New Bookstore Item!

Congress awarded the Little Rock Nine the country's highest award - the Congressional Gold Medal - in 1998 in recognition of their courage in desegregating Central High. In 2007, Congress again recognized their achievements and the significance of the 50th Anniversary by authorizing the U.S. Mint to issue a Commemorative Silver dollar.

Both the replica congressional gold medal ($10.95) and the Little Rock Central High School Desegregation Silver Dollar ($39.00) are available for purchase at the park bookstore. You can also browse our website for bookstore selection by going to www.nps.gov/chsc and clicking on Bookstore!

New Cultural Landscape Report in Progress

The National Park Service (NPS) is contracting with John Milner Associates, Inc. to produce a Cultural Landscape Report and Guidelines for the area around Central High School. The purpose of this report is to help the NPS and its partners with the Little Rock School District, the City of Little Rock, and neighborhood residents preserve the cultural landscape of the site and its neighborhood setting.

The report will provide a history of the area and document the structures and features that were here in 1957-58. The report also will analyze the landscape's historical significance and integrity (the degree to which it has remained the same as it was in 1957-59) and will provide guidelines for the NPS and others to use to help maintain the historic landscape. For example, if a homeowner in the neighborhood wants to rebuild a front porch and make it look similar to the home's original porch, this Cultural Landscape Report will provide information and examples to help him or her determine the appropriate size, location, and materials used for the porch.

We met with several partners and residents in October to discuss the first draft of the report and this spring, we will host a public meeting to discuss the completed draft report and guidelines. Stay tuned to our website or call for more information about this upcoming meeting.

Calling All Boy Scouts!

Boy Scouts now can earn a Scout Ranger Patch, Junior Ranger Badge and a Resource Stewardship Scout Ranger Program certificate either as part of a troop or individually by completing the historic site's Junior Ranger Program, joining a ranger on an interpretive talk or completing volunteer projects at the historic site. A similar program currently is being developed with Girl Scouts.

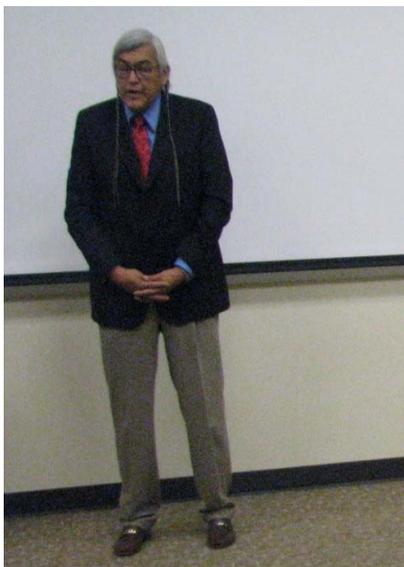

Anyone between the ages 9 through 12 can become a Junior Ranger. The Junior Ranger Program consists of completing an activity booklet which corresponds with the new visitor center exhibits. You will use clues in the exhibit to find answers to games and activities. Use the booklet as a guide to explore the interactive exhibits and learn about the past and also how you can contribute to America's future. The Scout Ranger Program and Junior Ranger Program are free.

If you are unable to visit the park and would like to be a junior, log on to www.nps.gov/webangers and become a WebRanger. A WebRanger is a Caretaker, an Adventurer, a Learner, a Seeker, and a Discover WebRanger is designed for ages 6-9, 10-12, and 13 and up. You can be a WebRanger!

Civil Rights and Human Rights: American Indian Experiences

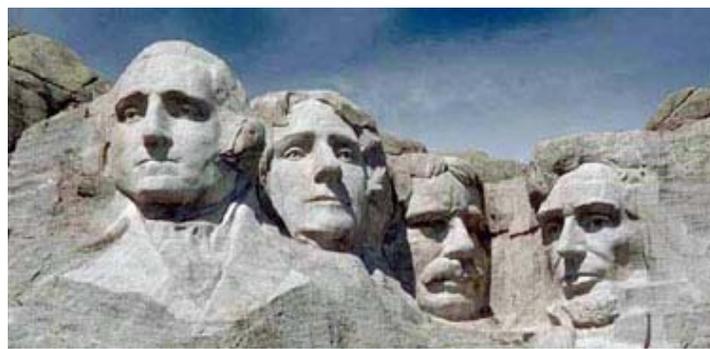

Gerard Baker

Gerard Baker, Superintendent of Mount Rushmore National Memorial was the guest speaker for our National American Indian Heritage Month in November. Gerard is a full-blood member of the Mandan-Hidatsa Tribe of the Fort Berthold Indian Reservation, in Mandaree, North Dakota. He started his career with the park service in 1979. Since then he has traveled and worked for many sites within the National Park Service. As superintendent, Gerard has supported interpretive programs at Mount Rushmore regarding American Indians as well as the magnificent carving of Presidents George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, and Theodore Roosevelt symbolizing the first 150 years of our nation's history.

Gerard spoke about the parallels between human rights issues as experienced by Native Americans and the civil rights issues experienced by the Little Rock Nine. The staff and visitors really appreciated the history Gerard shared with them. Park Guide Julie Jackson commented, "I was aware of some of the human rights issues associated with American Indians, but after listening to Gerard, I have a better understanding how bad it really is for American Indians - they are treated as property of the United States Government. This is something that is happening today that few people bother to learn about." Rangers and community members are still talking about the program and how the discussion increased their knowledge and appreciation for Native American history and culture. To learn more about Mount Rushmore National Memorial log onto www.nps.gov/moru.

This edition of Constitutional Writes is dedicated to the late “Park Ranger Amy Garrett.” We miss you!

Farewell and Congratulations

Julie Jackson has been a Park Guide at the site for more than four years. She has taken on collateral duties as the site's Library Manager, Recycling Coordinator, and Bike Program Coordinator. Julie is a certified NPS League Cycling Instructor with the League of American Bicyclists and is qualified to teach bike safety and maintenance classes to park rangers. As Bike Program Coordinator, Julie developed 2 bike-with-a ranger programs. The newest tour outlined the Trail of Tears National Historic Trail in Arkansas along the Arkansas River Trail through a "Connect Trails to Parks" grant, which allowed the purchase of 2 new ranger bikes and equipment.

Julie established recycling at the visitor center as the site's Recycling Coordinator. Recycling bins can be found in the lobby area of the visitor center and in the administrative offices for both the public and staff to use. Most recently, Julie became a carded Type 2 Wildland Firefighter.

We are sad to report that Julie is leaving the National Park Service to join the Department of Homeland Security as a Customs and Border Protection Officer in Del Rio, TX. Her current plans are to gain the training and experiences needed to become a commissioned law enforcement officer. Julie loves the National Park Service and knows that it is only a matter of time before she returns. Reflecting on her time in the NPS Julie said, "I have had so many great experiences and met some pretty incredible people in the National Park Service. I am so thankful for having had this opportunity."

From all of the staff here at CHSC, thank you for all of your hard work and dedication. We wish you the best of luck in the future and we hope to see you soon!
