Davis Mountains State Park

Davis Mountains State Park blends the best Texas has to offer – scenic mountains, picturesque campsites, superb birdwatching, beautiful trails and a historic full-service hotel. Meet the rare Montezuma quail in the morning and climb a rocky mountain slope in the evening. Bask in the warmth of a campfire or relax in a quaint room at Indian Lodge, built in 1933 by the Civilian Conservation Corps. One visit to Davis Mountains is sure to lead to more!

Camping: campsites with water only or water and electricity plus tent pads or full hookups with shade shelters and cable TV. Also primitive camping sites.

Group Facility: group picnic area without shelter.

Picnicking: picnic tables and grills.

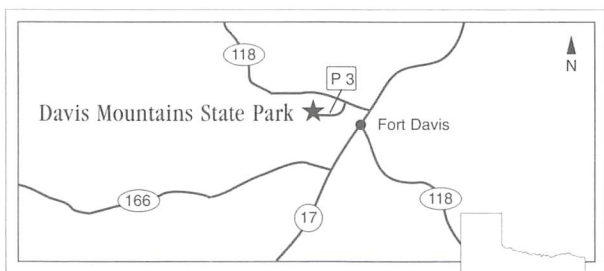

Interpretive Center: natural history exhibits.

Trails: 4-mile hiking trail connects with trail to Fort Davis National Historic Site. Also various hiking trails, a mountain bike trail and equestrian trails.

Special Feature: Skyline Drive winds to the park's highest ridges and provides a breath-taking view of the park and Davis Mountains.

Located in Jeff Davis County, one mile north of Fort Davis on Texas 17, then three miles west on Texas 118 to Park Road 3.
