Located on historic Bathhouse Row, the Buckstaff Bathhouse, a National Historic Landmark, has been in continuous operation since 1912 and remains the only bathhouse providing the traditional bathing experience in Hot Springs National Park.

Over the years, thousands of visitors and local residents have found therapeutic healing and relief from various ailments using the thermal water for bathing at the Buckstaff Bathhouse while jug fountains provide odorless and clean tasting thermal water for drinking.

The thermal mineral water comes from the 47 protected springs located along the lower slopes of Hot Springs Mountain. Maintaining an average 143° at their source, with an average flow rate of 700,000 gallons per day, the water is cooled and used in our thermal mineral water baths at a maximum temperature of 100°. Additionally, the Buckstaff uses the thermal mineral waters for heating during the winter months.
