Huelga! Time to Strike!

Do you see the word “Huelga” written on the wall inside of the visitor center? In Spanish, it means to strike. When someone is on strike, they stop working to let people know that they want something to change at work.

In 1965, César Chávez and grape farm workers went on strike because they did not think it was fair to work without restrooms or clean water to drink. They also wanted farm owners to pay them better wages so that they had enough money to buy food.

Here are some ways people can make changes.

Living in the Footsteps of Farm Workers

If you were a farm worker living and working on a grape farm in 1965, you might live in a house on a farm similar to the one you see in the visitor center. Can you find it? Take a walk inside the house. Can you imagine that up to eight people lived in a house this size? Sometimes more than one family lived in these small houses. Many of these rented homes did not have a kitchen, a toilet, running water, or electricity.

List or draw 3 items in your house that the farm workers didn't have. Could you live without these items? Why not?

Who's Your Hero?

Does someone inspire you to be a better person? They might be your hero!

César Chávez looked up to Martin Luther King Jr. and Mahatma Gandhi because they never used violence in fighting for what they believed in. César Chávez followed in their footsteps and led nonviolent strikes and boycotts. Librado and Juana, César Chávez's parents, were also his heroes. They taught him the importance of working hard and caring for other people.

Victory for Farm Workers

César Chávez, women such as Dolores Huerta, and Filipino and Latino farm workers went on strike in 1965 for five years because Delano farm owners cut their pay. All across the United States and Canada, César Chávez and the United Farm Workers asked people in big cities and small towns to boycott table grapes to support the farm workers' cause.

Protestors marched for 300 miles from Delano to the state Capitol in Sacramento in 1966 to gain more support from the governor, Californians, and the nation. Their hard work paid off in 1970, when the first union contracts were signed between table grape farmers and the United Farm Workers. It was a big victory because these union contracts would make life better for the farm workers.

Find your way through the maze of streets and highways from Delano to Sacramento.

A Peaceful Community

César Chávez National Monument is also known as La Paz, which means a place of peace. It was also the national headquarters for the United Farm Workers and where César Chávez lived since 1971 and worked for over 20 years.

Established by César Chávez and the United Farm Workers, La Paz was once a community full of life. Over 250 people lived at La Paz from 1971 through the 1980s. Just like any other community, there were homes, offices, a school, a fire station, and a community center. There were many celebrations at La Paz, too!

Honored for Helping

César Chávez was given the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1994 because he was a great supporter for nonviolent change and brought dignity to the life of so many people. The Medal is the highest award a person can receive from the President of the United States.

Besides this award, there are many schools, parks, streets, and buildings named after him. He will always be remembered and honored for his commitment to helping farm workers.

Prayer of the Farm Workers' Struggle

César Chávez wrote this prayer that gave strength to him and others to stay strong as they fought together for what they believed in:

Show me the suffering of the most miserable;
so I will know my people's plight.

Free me to pray for others;
for you are present in every person.

Help me take responsibility for my own life;
so that I can be free at last.

Grant me courage to serve others;
for in service there is true life.

Give me honesty and patience;
so that I can work with other workers.

Bring forth song and celebration;
so that the Spirit will be alive among us.

Let the Spirit flourish and grow;
so that we will never tire of the struggle.

Let us remember those who have died for justice;
for they have given us life.

Help us love even those who hate us;
so we can change the world.

Amen.
