Civil Rights in the NPS

On August 28, 1963 Dr. King delivered his famous "I Have A Dream" speech from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, which is managed by the National Park Service. On October 10, 1980 President Jimmy Carter signed the bill that created the Martin Luther King, Jr., National Historic Site (NHS) in Atlanta, Georgia. In recent years, three additional units have been added to the National Park System that commemorate the Civil Rights Movement of the 1950s and '60s: Brown v. Board of Education NHS in 1993, Selma to Montgomery National Historic Trail (NHT) in 1996, and Little Rock Central High School NHS in 1998.

Aside from the previously mentioned sites relating to the Civil Rights Movement, the National Park Service also preserves sites important to other civil rights struggles that have taken place in the United States. The following questions relate to some of the other civil rights struggles. For further assistance, you may use the wall map located at the Visitor Center.

Mormon Pioneer NHT follows the route that the Mormons took when moving from Illinois to Utah. Why do you think the Mormons moved?

Name the national historical park in Pennsylvania where our founding fathers met to create a "more perfect Union."

Name the national historical park in upstate New York which commemorates the first Women's Rights Convention in 1848 and the early leaders of the Women's Rights Movement in the United States.

Name the national historic site in southern California which commemorates the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II.

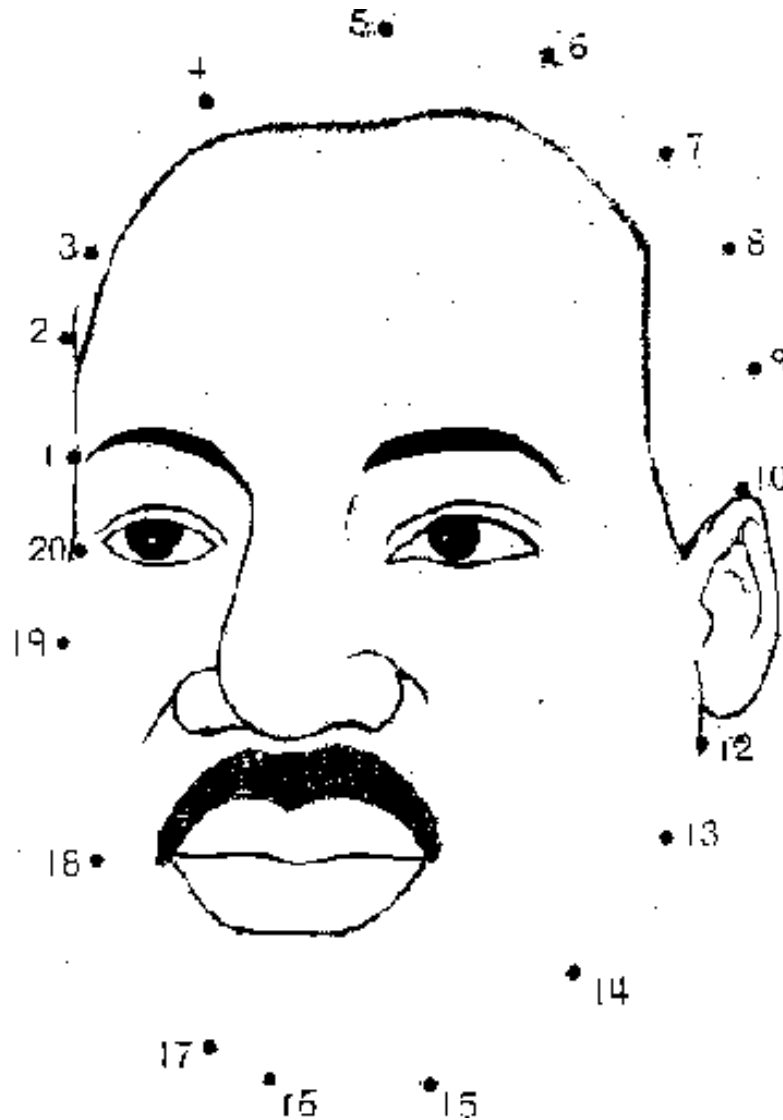

Trail of Tears NHT commemorates the forced removal of the Cherokees from the Southern Appalachia Mountains to the Native American territory (Oklahoma) during the winter of 1838-39. Why is it called the Trail of Tears?
