A COPPER LEGACY.....

Michigan's Copper industry began thousands of years ago when ancient miners attacked exposed veins of pure copper with huge hammer-stones. The tools and techniques of mining advanced considerably in the centuries that followed, and Coppertown's Mining Museum traces this evolution of mines and mining people with a series of exhibits designed for the family visitor:

The focus of the Coppertown Museum is to tell the story of these mines, communities and people, and we hope that some of this native pride will rub off on those who are new to the Copper Country. It isn't easy to forget the Keweenaw Peninsula. Since your museum visit will involve a 13 minute video followed by a self-guided tour, please allow at least 45 minutes.
