

DOORWAY TO ADVENTURE

VISIT A
LESSER-USED PARK

Natchez Trace Parkway, Miss.-Tenn.-Ala.

Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore, Michigan

These are little known places in America's National Park System. These are places that may be new or off the beaten track. Yet they—and many more like them—contain as much of the nation's beauty and portray as vividly the heritage of this great land as do the better known parks visited by so many millions of people every year. This booklet lists those places where you will find almost everything you might see in more popular parks—except crowds. I hope that many Americans will visit these lesser used areas of their National Park System. You should have many new and wonderful experiences. And, by avoiding crowds in busier parks, you'll be helping us protect the irreplaceable wonders which are America's National Parks.

Gary Everhardt
Director, National Park Service
Department of the Interior

Here are a few suggestions for planning your visit:

- Stop first at the visitor center of any unit of the National Park System. Free literature, and often exhibits, movies, and slide presentations are available to help you understand the area.
- Be careful . . . observe the common sense rules of safety. Natural hazards abound in outdoor areas, but visiting the national parks can be a safe experience if you use ordinary precautions. Don't molest wild animals, or swim or climb alone. In historic buildings, watch for low doorways and steep steps. Always inquire at the visitor center about possible hazards in that park.
- Entrance fees usually of $2 or $3 per vehicle are charged at many parks. If you plan frequent visits, the $10 Golden Eagle Passport may save you money. If you are at least 62 years old, you are eligible for the free Golden Age Passport which covers admission and provides a 50 percent discount on campground and other user fees. Both passports are available at park entrances throughout the Nation.
- Special restrictions sometimes apply to backpackers using environmentally fragile back-country areas. Free permits to use certain trails and areas are issued by Park Rangers at the park. Applications usually are made in person, but you can write the park where you plan to hike for further information.
- Many fine State parks and National Forests may be located near national Park System areas. Information on both National and State parks as well as National Forests can be obtained from State Travel Directors in capital cities.

As the Nation's principal conservation agency, the Department of the Interior has responsibility for most of our nationally owned public lands and natural resources. This includes fostering the wisest use of our land and water resources, protecting our fish and wildlife, preserving the environmental and cultural values of our national parks and historical places, and providing for the enjoyment of life through outdoor recreation. The Department assesses our energy and mineral resources and works to assure that their development is in the best interests of all our people. The Department also has a major responsibility for American Indian reservation communities and for people who live in Island Territories under U.S. administration.
