The Bedford Boys... A Town's Ultimate Sacrifice

By Ranger Kathy Kagle

Testled in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia lies the small town of Bedford (pop. 3200). Although life in this town might have appeared simplistic and removed from the outside world in the 1940s, the residents were very much aware that the United States was at war with Germany and her were very much aware that the United States was at war with Germany and her allies. The young men of Bedford, like thousands across the nation, joined the various armed forces and prepared for deployment overseas. For many of them, this would be their first time outside the mountains.

Being from a small town, a group of these men grew up together, hung out together, and joined the National Guard together. They became part of Company 'A' of the 116th Infantry, in the 29th Infantry Division. Lieutenant Elisha Ray Nance, a Bedford Boy himself, assisted in training and preparing them for combat. In September 1942, they shipped out with their division to Great Britain, leaving behind their families, friends, and everything they had ever known and loved. Whatever awaited them, they were determined to face as a band of brothers.

On June 6, 1944, the invasion of Normandy began with the D-Day landings. At 6:30 a.m., the first ship-to-shore craft lowered its ramp and 29 men of Company 'A' (19 were Bedford Boys) debarked and

by Ranger Christopher Gwinn

For most visitors to the National Mall, the statue to General George Gordon Meade is as unfamiliar as the man himself. While the names Washington, Lincoln, and Jefferson are as epic as the monument and memorials that honor them, few come to the nation's capital to pay tribute to this humble soldier from Pennsylvania. However, those strolling past the Old Post Office Tower toward the eastern end of Pennsylvania Ave. will discover the likeness of a man who achieved one of the greatest victories in American military history, and who helped preserve the country through four years of brutal Civil War.

www.nps.gov/mall

Born to American parents in Cadiz, Spain on December 31, 1815, George Meade belonged to one of the most prominent families in Philadelphia. Though not desirous of a career as a soldier, young Meade attended the U. S. Military Academy, graduated in the class of 1835, and served in the army through campaigns in Florida and Mexico. In the year 1840, he fell in love with Margeretta Sergeant and the two were soon started wading toward the beach. Germans occupying the high ground in bunkers and trenches opened fire on them with murderous effect. Mercilessly the Germans cut them down as they tried to reach the shore. Using machine guns that fired 1,000 rounds a minute, they raked the beach killing all 29 men in a matter of minutes. The tide was already in and as it flowed back out, it dragged the bodies of dead and dying men with it, only to redeposit them on the beach or leave them bobbing in the water.

As wave after wave of assault troops approached the beach, the Nazis repeatedly raked the beach, targeting anything that moved, floated, or lay prone on the sand. Shortly after Lieutenant Nance came ashore, he found himself targeted and was wounded twice trying to escape the deadly ordeal. As he lay there on the beach bleeding, he could see the bodies of the men he had known and trained strewn all around. Nance was one of the lucky ones who survived to return to his hometown, but 19 of the Bedford Boys were gone forever.

There were 9000 killed or wounded as a result of the D-Day landings, but their sacrifice was not in vain. Their efforts enabled the Allied forces to eventually gain control of Normandy and open a pathway to Germany's borders.

In the World War II Memorial, the Bedford Boys, like so many other men and women of that extraordinary generation, are commemorated in the bas-relief panels depicting scenes of their heroism, but it is the Field of Stars that is the focal point of the memorial, and a sobering reminder of how many men and women gave the ultimate sacrifice for 'The Price of Freedom.'

Meade From page 1 in April of 1861, Meade was made a Brigadier General and placed in command of thousands of Pennsylvanians who had volunteered to defend the Union. To his men, Meade made an unlikely commander. He lacked the dash and personality of other officers, his foul language was notorious, and his ill temper caused even the most hardened veteran to shy away. Physically, he was uninspiring. One reporter described Meade as "certainly not handsome or graceful, thin faced, with grizzled beard and moustache... a man who impresses you rather as a thoughtful student than a dashing soldier." Yet Meade led his men with skill and daring, and soon gained the respect of those who served with him.

George Meade's greatest test would come on June 28, 1863. Robert E. Lee's Meade Statue at the Meade Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Confederate army had invaded Pennsylvania – the fate of the Union hung in the balance. That day Meade received word that President Abraham Lincoln had placed him in command of the Union Army of the Potomac. Bravely shouldering the enormous responsibility, Meade led 90,000 men in the bloodiest fighting of the war just three days after taking command. For three days the Battle of Gettysburg raged as Meade and Lee faced off. When the smoke cleared on July 4th, 53,000 Americans had become casualties, but Lee and his Confederates had retreated back into Virginia. It was the greatest battlefield victory of General Meade's career and helped to turn the tide of the Civil War. Though often overshadowed by Ulysses S. Grant, Meade played a vital role in securing a final Union victory; demonstrated nowhere more clearly than at the Battle of Gettysburg.

Dedicated in 1927 by President Calvin Coolidge, and sculpted from marble by artist Charles Grafly, the Meade Memorial honors the man who led the Union Army at Gettysburg. Meade stands flanked by the figures Loyalty and Chivalry. Together the two strain to remove the heavy cloak of responsibility he wore during his years as commander of the Army of the Potomac. With victory won and the burden at last lifted, Meade turns his back to the menacing figure of War, which guards the rear of the monument. With the bloodshed over, Meade gazes forward, toward a peaceful future in the nation he helped to save.

Finding Your Way on the National Mall Just Got Easier!

Look For Our New Wayfinding Improvements

In an effort to assist visitors to National Mall and Memorial Parks orient themselves and arrive at their intended destinations, the first element of an informational and directional sign project was recently installed adjacent to the Smithsonian Metro stop. This sign will improve the visitor experience on what is referred to as "America's Front Yard."

This new map, 17 feet wide and 8 feet tall, is the first step in a multi-phased effort from National Mall and Memorial Parks and the Trust for the National Mall (the park's official fundraising partner) to implement the National Mall Plan's call for improved signage and better wayfinding for all visitors, especially for new and infrequent visitors. The newly unveiled map is the largest sign in the wayfinding program and is the new "welcome sign" for the National Mall. It is a two-sided sign composed of two large panels – one panel is a "You are Here" map and the other panel provides printed visitor information, including sites of frequently-visited National Mall attractions.

PANEL C PANEL D

Visitors to the National Mall depend upon signage and graphics to facilitate their visits. The new and uniform signage will establish a positive image and identity of the National Mall. The implementation of this project follows years of planning and design cooperation between park neighbors including the Smithsonian Institution and other agencies adjacent to the Mall, the DC Office of Planning and Historic Preservation Office, the National Capital Planning Commission, and the adjacent Business Improvement Districts. The result is a sign program that is user-friendly and integrated with neighboring sign programs.

"The new wayfinding project is the beginning of providing all visitors to this park with the most user-friendly tools of quickly and efficiently getting to and from the sites and destinations they want to visit," said Acting Superintendent Mike Caldwell, National Mall and Memorial Parks. "With the help and assistance from our partner, the Trust for the National Mall, as well as guidance from the National Mall Plan, I'm confident we will raise not only the standards by which parks best communicate to the visitor, but also to make clear visitors are in one of this nation's National Parks."

The wayfinding project is a $2.2 million effort funded through the National Park Service's Centennial Initiative in partnership with the Trust for the National Mall. The full project includes the design, fabrication and installation of pedestrian wayfinding and regulatory signage on the National Mall and East Potomac Park. All existing pedestrian signage will be replaced with unified elements for effective visitor information. The signs will provide wayfinding while preserving open space and viewsheds. The sign system, when finished, will be composed of approximately 500 signs and include operational signs (containing regulatory/restrooms/food service information), wayfinding signs (containing directional signs/map directories information), and identification signs (containing park facilities information).

National Park Service App for National Mall and Memorial Parks

The official National Park Service app for National Mall and Memorial Parks will be coming soon to the Apple iTunes App Store and Google Android Market. While you are visiting Washington, D.C., use it to explore many of the United States' cherished cultural and historical sites—from the Lincoln Memorial to the White House. The app covers 70 sites in all.

Some of the app features include...

- Map Official National Park Service map of the core tourist area in Washington, D.C. Designed for ease of use while outdoors, the map has large type sizes, walkways that are easily distinguishable from roads, and three levels of zoom. By tapping the "Locate me" icon you will always know where you are.
- Park Lens Find out what is around you with augmented reality. Just hold your device up and labels will appear identifying all sites on the National Mall.
- Walking directions Get from one place to another by following a line on the map or as list directions. Estimated walking times are given.
- Accessibility Audio described images combined with the built-in iOS accessibility features allow full enjoyment of the National Mall and Memorial Parks.
- Tours Follow a recommended tour depending on how much time you have, or your special interest—from presidents to military monuments to off the beaten path. The app maps the route for you.

- Sites Learn more about points of interest with lively text, professional photographs, and engaging podcasts under the "Album" button. The "Info" button has the site's location, hours of operation, nearest Metro station, and other essential information.
- Events and News Get up-to-date information from the National Park Service about what is happening at National Mall and Memorial Parks.
- Postcard Send a digital postcard to friends and family from the National Mall with the click of a button.
- Park Partner The Trust for the National Mall strives to make the National Mall the best park in the world. Learn more about the essential help that they provide at www.nationalmall.org.
- Small size Weighing in at 13.7MB, the app will download relatively quickly via a 3G cellular connection or the free Wi-Fi available on the east end of the National Mall.

Ranger Gil Lyons

Tational Park Service Ranger Gil Lyons Was born and raised here in DC, but the Washington of Gil's youth was another world. Gil remembers Benning Rd. N.E. Washington, DC as a country area where most people grew their own vegetables, raised chickens, and some even kept hogs. He says, "You could hear frogs at night."

Ranger Gil Lyons (left) with World War II veteran Robert Cherry.

Q. What were the significant experiences A. you had growing up?

A. I remember visiting Suburban Gardens located at 50th and Hayes St. This was the first all African American amusement park in the area, very similar to Glen Echo Park. It was founded by African American investors in the 1920s. Suburban Gardens had ferris wheels, swimming pools, games of chance, picnic grounds, and a large dance pavilion where famous jazz musicians performed. In those days, blacks could get into Glen Echo Park but...could not get into any of the amusement areas and ride the cars.

On Fourth of July, of course our families went to the National Mall and the National Zoo because they were open to everyone. In Washington, DC segregation laws were easier, but once you went over the 14th St. Bridge, you got into Virginia which had much more stringent social codes.

Q. When did you join the military and what was life like in the American Army?

A. In 1949 I went to 16 weeks of army base camp at Indian Town Gap in Harrisburg, PA. I went into the reserves until I was called into active duty in 1952. We were in Inchon, Korea heading north where all the fighting was. We saw a lot of action that summer, fall, winter, and spring. I was even shot! I was in the communication section, laying telephone lines between companies in the front lines.

Q. What was it like to go from a rural area in northeast Washington to war in Korea?

You did not think about it. All you focused on was survival. We were pioneers of integration. In our training camp, we had little problem with abusive language or fighting among different races. One guy who said that he was not going to share sleeping quarters with a bunch of blacks was given a pop-up tent and told to help himself outside. When we got to Korea, things got even better. We became one tight family unit. If one got

War is hell. It changes you because you witness things young people should never have to witness. However, it also changes you for the good because you learn to grow up fast when you realize how quick life could be lost. You also learn that no matter where you are from, people are the same and want the same things out of life. I started to see my life through the eyes of Koreans who did not share America's history of racism. To them I was just an American. In the end, I am glad that I joined the US Army because I learned to defend freedom for everyone.

Secrets of the Washington Monument

Why is the Washington Monument two different colors?

During construction in the 1850s, the Washington National Monument Society did not have enough money to finish the work. Construction stopped and did not continue again until the late 1870s. By then, the builders had to use stone from a different quarry even though it did not match.

What's Inside?

The Washington National Monument Society accepted donations and commemorative stones from different states, cities, countries, and organizations who wanted to honor George Washington. The inside walls of the Washington Monument are lined with 193 of these special stones. View all of the stones online at www.nps.gov/wamo.

Message from the Superintendent une is a great time experience National Mall and Memorial Parks. Our ranger staff are here daily from 8:30 a.m. until midnight to present programs throughout National Mall and to make your visit safe and memorable. During June we offer a wide variety of programs including bike tours, walking running tours, tours, and ranger talks at each of the Memorials.

As always we welcome feedback from you on your experience so please contact us at the address listed on the front of the newspaper or e-mail us your comments at:

NAMA_Superintendent @nps.gov.

Thank you for visiting, and we hope you have a wonderful experience at National Mall and Memorial Parks.

Acting Superintendent Mike Caldwell "Monuments, and reservations, which purpose is to conserve the scenery and the natural and historic objects and the wildlife therein and to provide for the enjoyment of the same in such manner and by such means as will leave them unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations."

Old Post Office Tower

This unique site stands on Pennsylvania Avenue near the halfway point between the White House and the Capitol. The Old Post Office Tower ranks third in height among the buildings of the Nation's Capital, soaring to a majestic 315 feet. At the 270 foot level, there is an observation deck allowing visitors an awe-inspiring view of Washington D.C. and the surrounding area. Beneath the observation deck is the tower clock, now more than a century old. On the tenth floor are the beautiful Bells of Congress. These bells are replicas of those at London's Westminster Abbey and were a Bicentennial gift from the Ditchley Foundation in England.

Q. What was your first park experience?

A. I came to National Mall and Memorial Parks (NAMA) as a volunteer. I came down to the Korean War Veterans Memorial dedication and was asked by one of the volunteers to join them.

I tried it, and before knew it, I had 1815 hours, nearly as many as the rangers who worked there. The superintendent heard about this and asked me to give him my resume. And that is how I joined the National Park Service.

Q. What are the best parts of being a ranger on the National Mall?

A. The best parts of being a ranger at the Mall are that you get to meet so many interesting people, you get to give different programs at different sites, and you get to take part in all kinds of special events. Every time I get ready to retire, something wonderful happens at work, and I feel that I need to stick around a little longer. The inauguration of Barack Obama was one of these events for me.
