DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

A long, low one-story cabin, the original one room portion of which is constructed of overhanging round notched logs with a log purlin roof support structure. As the Courtney family increased, several frame additions were made. Generally, the log portion is in fair shape, although repairs, such as a new roof, are urgently needed. The frame additions, to the rear of the cabin, have deteriorated, probably beyond restoration. The simple gable roof overhangs a small porch at the front of the house, a typical feature of early structures in the Stehekin Valley.

In front of the house is a subterranean root cellar, reached through a small frame entrance and stairs. The interior condition of this cellar is unknown.

Boundary: NW ¼ of NW ¼ Sec. 16, T 33 N, R 17 E

Location: Travel northwest on Stehekin Valley Road approximately 4.4 miles. Turn left across Stehekin River Bridge and proceed 2.4 miles. Cabin is located on right side of road on edge of clearing at road's end.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Possibly built in the 1880's or 1890's by a man named McComb, the Courtney Cabin is a prime example of early homesteading cabins in the Stehekin Valley; these cabins were built entirely by hand and from local materials. Acquired by the father of the present senior generation of Courtneys, it stands as mute testimony to the hardiness of the pioneers in this remote land.

The present-day Courtneys, known far and wide for their many skills as mountain guides and outdoorsmen, were born and raised in this cabin.

It is one of the few surviving examples of the beginning of pioneering in this spectacular, remote mountain valley some 80 years ago.

DESCRIPTION AND BACKGROUND HISTORY INCLUDING CONSTRUCTION DATE(S), PHYSICAL DIMENSIONS, MATERIALS, MAJOR ALTERATIONS, IMPORTANT BUILDERS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, ETC.

Log cabin. Log construction set on rock and earth foundation; rectangle (17' x 21'); 1-bay wide; 1-story; round logs with hand-hewn planked ends and saddle-notched corners; metal-covered (over wood shake) gable roof extended on east 7' to form porch overhang; wood panel and glass center entrance on east with plain surrounds. Exterior features include boarded-up horizontal window openings (approx. 32" x 60") cut into log walls on north and south; door opening on west with 9" board surrounds; plain fascia board; porch supported by 2 log posts with low railing and squared posts. Notable features: "H.L. Courtney" engraved in cement chinking on east.

This log cabin may have been built and/or lived in by an early settler named McComb, although this is unclear. By 1917 McComb had left the valley, perhaps abandoning this place. In 1918 it became the home of Hugh Lawrence Courtney who came to Stehekin in 1917 and stayed to raise a family (descendents remain in valley today). As the Courtney family grew, wood frame additions were made to the original cabin (these were removed c.1970s). A root cellar with a wood frame entrance structure stood nearby (removed). The cabin was lived in until the 1950s, and remained in the Courtney family until Curt Courtney sold to the National Park Service in 1971. A metal roof was placed over the shake roof to prevent further deterioration and windows were boarded-up. Other than these preservation measures, nothing else has been done to alter the appearance of this early cabin.
