Hiking Safely

You are about 4,000 feet (1,219 m) above sea level. For your safety, be prepared when hiking at high elevations.

- Leave No Trace. Take only pictures and leave plants, animals, and rocks for others to enjoy.
- Carry plenty of food and water.
- Respect road closures and gates.
- Stay on hard surfaces as much as possible.
- Observe all boot brush locations on the trail.
- Respect wildlife by not feeding them.
- Keep pets off trails (even when on a leash).
- Smoking in authorized paved areas only.
- Wash soils from your vehicle.

Before You Go

Check at the Visitor Center or ask a ranger for trail conditions. Tell someone about your hiking plans including routes and how long you will be.

Summer Hiking

Be cautious of overheating. If you feel hot, sit in the shade and cool off. Bring layers of clothing, sunscreen, and a hat — weather can change rapidly here.

Winter Hiking

Trails are not maintained or well marked during the winter. Carry a map and emergency supplies and equipment. Dress warmly and try to stay dry.

Poisonous Plants

Some plants along the trails are toxic. If you are unsure which plants or fungi are poisonous, enjoy from a safe distance.

Cedar Root Disease

A fungus carried in water and mud kills susceptible saplings within months and mature trees within two to four years. For more information visit: <http://1.usa.gov/1HDHLDU>
