

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HERITAGE FUND

Preserving Rocky Mountain National Park's Past For the Future

Dozens of historic buildings dot Rocky Mountain National Park. Even more can be found in the neighboring communities and adjacent national forest. This is where our historical heritage comes to life. These are reminders of generations past.

As stewards of history, the Rocky Mountain Nature Association has already restored many significant buildings, including the William Allen White cabins, the Shadow Mountain Fire Lookout, various buildings at the Holzwarth and McGraw Ranches, the famous Wigwam Tearoom and Moraine Park Museum, just to name a few.

Each year the RMNA and RMNP select special buildings needing help. Only through the hands-on strategies of repair, restoration and adaptive use will these buildings be saved and this important history be conveyed to coming generations.
