

MALTESE CROSS CABIN

THEODORE ROOSEVELT NATIONAL PARK

MALTESE CROSS CABIN

The Maltese Cross Cabin was built between September 1883 and April 1884 by the ranch partners of Theodore Roosevelt. It served as a base of operations for Roosevelt's ranching business for several years, and today sits behind the South Unit Visitor Center at Theodore Roosevelt National Park. The restored building represents a time when a young man came to experience a vanishing frontier, and expose himself to what he would fondly call "the strenuous life."