Heartfelt Thanks

Dear Yellowstone Park Friends,
Thank you for all of the kind wishes and thoughts you sent when I was injured. My doctor says I might even be able to ski this winter. More surgery is planned but not for quite some time. I think all of you are very kind.
Love, Krui Seibert

During November, the Research Library received five new fireproof file cabinets from some very generous patrons, Charles and Leandra Holland of California. Leandra Holland has been using our reference library for several years, and observed our need for more file space. Before this, they had donated two cabinets which house the Manuscript and Rare Separate files.

On November 18, a crew of five men, including Hank Quintana, Dennis Zafft, Morris Bray, Wally Wines, and Devon Martin delivered the cases to the library. This was no small feat as each one weighs 710—yes, that's right—710 pounds!! The library staff would like to say a BIG THANK YOU to these men, who have done this service over and above their usual duties. We appreciate it more than we can say.

*Enjoy the Holidays!
See you in 1997!*

Festivities Planned for December 16

The Yellowstone Federal Employees Association will be sponsoring a "Holiday Party" on Monday, December 16 at 3:30 p.m. in the Mammoth Canteen Gym. Amid a "winter wonderland" theme, the YFEA and friends will transform the gym into a place you can relax, enjoy fine food and spirits, listen to some of your favorite local musicians perform their style of music, and mingle with friends. The Association reminds the interior folks who want to attend this event that there are accommodations at Mammoth for overnight lodging, and they can contact Dayna McClure for details.

YFEA and the Yellowstone Center for Resources would like to help out a family in need this holiday season by providing them with gifts, food, and clothing. The family has three young boys who wear size 32/34 pants, dress shirts size 15/16, or large T-shirts; and coat sizes 36/38 or large. Monetary and food donations would also be appreciated and there will be donation boxes set up around the gym. Your contributions will help brighten the holidays for this family.

YFEA would like to thank all the planners, organizers, and participants who have graciously donated their energy and time in the preparation of this event. We couldn't do it without you! See you on Monday afternoon.

White House Ornaments Are Here!

Come and see the ornaments on display in the Superintendent's Office. The White House Historical Association has donated a complete set (1981-1996) of White House ornaments to Yellowstone Park to help celebrate the park's 125th anniversary in 1997. The ornaments can be purchased from the White House Historical Association. If you're interested, just ask Jean or Jan for an order form

"What's Shakin' at Grant?" an update by Naturalist Mary Wilson

Residents of Grant Village were given a little reminder that Yellowstone is still a seismically active area, no matter how tranquil it may appear on the surface! At around 0500 on November 25, sleeping residents were awakened by low, rumbling vibrations that continued off and on for almost an hour. At first, some folks just thought that more snow was sloughing off their roofs, but it was only about five degrees above zero outside and no fresh snow piles were visible just under the eaves. It soon became apparent that the rumblings were small earthquakes!

At some residences, plates and glasses rattled in the kitchen, dresser drawer knobs clanked against the wood, and one bedside lamp slid onto the floor. At the West Thumb warming hut, the front door frame was twisted slightly out of kilter and its window frame loosened. There were no detectable changes in the thermal features at the basin, however. It was later determined that the magnitude of the quakes ranged from 2.2 to 2.9 and that the epicenter was located somewhere between the Grant housing area and Riddle Lake. No other park area felt the quakes, but reportedly a family dog down at the Moose housing area in Grand Teton National Park awakened suddenly at about 0500 and began running around the house howling for no apparent reason. Yellowstone is considered the second most seismically active area in the continental U.S.—second only to the San Andreas Fault area of California. Its geologic formation is based upon three, major, violent volcanic eruptions that occurred at approximately 1.8 million, 1.2 million, and 600,000 years ago—at, seemingly, 600,000 year intervals. It doesn't take higher math to realize that the area is "due" for another violent eruption at any time. Could the recent rumbling at Grant be an indication of things to come or just a reminder to us of the incredibly dynamic and fascinating resource we all have the privilege to enjoy and protect every day?

Research Library News

The Research Library will be closed from Dec. 23 through Jan. 3. Special arrangements may be made with the librarians by calling before Dec. 20 for use of the library during that time. The Library Staff wishes everyone a very happy holiday. Vanessa Christopher, Barbara Zafft, and Debby Young.

Park Buys Back Pieces of History at Estate Auction

By Susan Kraft, Supervisory Museum Curator

Several more pieces of Yellowstone's history came home recently when park museum staff procured a set of historic hotel furniture and an original work of art at the Bovey family estate auction held in Great Falls last month.

A set of wicker hotel furniture used in a park lodge, probably the Canyon lodge, and a charcoal drawing depicting tourists at Mammoth Hot Springs in 1910 were purchased for the park's museum collection using funds donated to the park.

Park Museum Curator Susan Kraft, who attended the auction, was able to identify the matched set of furniture by comparing it with photographs of furniture historically used in the park and listed in a 1929 concessioner inventory. The set consists of two, eight-foot-long chaise lounges that may have doubled as spare beds, a small writing desk, and a small table. The late Charles and Sue Ford Bovey, who owned Virginia and Nevada Cities, were known to have owned items from the Canyon area of Yellowstone, and the Boveys' appraiser stated that the furniture was once used on the porch of the Canyon Lodge.

Each year, many researchers ask to see and study Yellowstone's historic furnishings collection, which reflects the leisure habits of national park tourists through time and contains outstanding examples from important periods in the history of American furniture-making. The furnishings are also available for use in exhibits. The charcoal drawing, by Shirley Cleary illustrates the importance of Yellowstone as a subject for fine art. Some research is needed to learn more about Cleary, and whether she produced other works of art depicting Yellowstone. Indeed, the degree to which Yellowstone and artifacts associated with it are cherished by Americans was greatly in evidence at the auction; a c. 1915 Yellowstone and Western stagecoach in need of extensive conservation fetched the highest bid of the auction, $20,000, while stereocards featuring park views by William Henry Jackson went for $30 and $35 per card. The items obtained for the park museum collection were acquired at prices close to their appraised values.

'Tis The Season-To Be Wasteful

The holidays are a time of joy, togetherness-and extra waste. Here are some measures of the season's excesses:

 Tons of trash generated in the United States each week during the non-holiday season: 4 million tablespoon: 16.1 million

 Number of gifts the average U.S. consumer wraps during the holiday season: 20

 Tons of trash generated in the United States each week in the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas: 5 million

 Number of football fields that could be covered with the paper saved by wrapping three of those gifts with recycled wrap: 45,000

 Pounds of Thanksgiving turkey wasted if each person throws away one bite: 3.1 million

 Tons of extra garbage cleaned up by the New York Sanitation Department after the Times Square New Year's Eve celebration: 42

 Pounds of stuffing wasted if each person throws away one
