

Longing To Learn

Slaves like young Booker T. Washington were not allowed to go to school. When he carried books to school for his owner's daughter and saw children in the classroom learning, it made a great impression upon him. He felt that to get into a schoolhouse and study would be the same as getting into paradise.

To learn more, visit: www.nps.gov/bowa

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE