

CORPORAL ANDREW SLAGLE

Was one of the oldest members of Company K at 30 years of age, and so the other men looked up to him. He had been a lime burner, working by large kilns or ovens all day to burn down stone into lime, making it a much stronger material to build things. He asked permission to visit his home on July 1, 1863, promising to return early the next morning when they knew they would be asked fight. Andrew was true to his word, and on the next afternoon followed the flag into battle near Little Round Top.
