

PRIVATE JACOB STOUFFER

Was a shoemaker, and 27 years old at the time of enlistment. Shoe-making as a trade was fading as a profession due to the industrialization (creation of factories with machines to do much of the work) of the country at the time, but his skills likely came in handy during the long hard marches of the infantry.