

PRIVATE SAMUEL DIXON

Was an 18-year-old laborer when he joined the army. If you were a laborer in the 19th century, you could have worked in a factory, on a farm, or any place where physical work was required to get a job done. This likely meant that Samuel was strong and made a good soldier. His captain wrote "Nothing foolish about Sammy, but he was always there."