IT'S SOMETHING DIFFERENT

The new "Chateau" provides modern comforts, unusual entertainment and style of architecture entirely original. From the floor of the canyon, the six stories rise in majestic beauty blending with the forest and moss covered marble ledges of the surrounding country.

The motorist arriving at the Oregon Caves, over a hard surfaced highway, alights at the lounge door on the 4th floor of this unique structure. In its center the great atmosphere of rustic comfort. Wide plate windows look into the virgin forest. This restful lounge is equipped with upholstered davenports and chairs. Appurtenances of rooms and bath fit the occasion for perfect rest.

At the landing, overlooking the dining rooms on the third floor, one is amazed to hear, blending with music of the orchestra, the falls of the mountain stream, which wends its way across this room and on to the sea. The diners, between courses, join in the rhythm of music, after crossing a rustic bridge to the perfect dancing floor; the food—and the setting bring satisfaction. The service is almost entirely by alert and agreeable college students. The visitor is impressed with a feeling that the cheerful and earnest attention is a pleasure rather than a duty.

Oregon Caves Stage connects with Greyhound buses at Cave Junction, May 1 to October 1. See Greyhound, also Southern Pacific Schedules.

Paved Highway to Caves
The Caves are located in the heart of the Siskiyou, 4000 feet elevation, 50 miles from Grants Pass, where the Pacific and Redwood Highways meet and 76 miles from Crescent City, where the Redwood and Oregon Coast Highways meet. The Oregon Caves Highway, No. 46 connecting with the Redwood Highway at Cave Junction is of great interest. From Grants Pass, Oregon or Crescent City, California, a paved road to Caves entrance. Mechanics operate Service Station at the Caves — City prices.

The temperature at the Caves is delightfully cool.
There are no mosquitoes and no poison oak.

While You're Here

Of course, you will explore "The Marble Halls of Oregon." Ages before man looked upon this sphere, nature's artists were carving and molding within this mountain of marble. Through winding corridors, connecting countless chambers, are weird but majestic creations. Here, as though tapestries woven by unseen hands; there, likenesses of human figures. Probably no caverns of the world hold more to attract than the famous Ghost Chamber, Paradise Lost, King's Palace, Dante's Inferno, Wigwam and other rooms.
